THE PROBLEM

Parents in a custody case are often expected to show they have taken a class, and the classes are usually paid for out of pocket.

WHAT THE PROGRAM OFFERS

- Eight short lessons, one skill each: staying calm before a handoff, keeping children out of the middle, short messages to the other parent, repairing after an argument, what children need to hear, and where to find support.
- A certificate of completion that can be shown to a court.
- Parent circles, six to eight parents with a trained facilitator, to practice and feel less alone.
- Other languages and measured results, using established questionnaires, shared every year.

WHAT IT IS NOT, AND HOW A REFERRAL WORKS

Not therapy, not legal advice, and not a way to decide custody. Where there is abuse, the goal is safety, not contact, and the course says so. A clerk, attorney or clinician hands a parent a card with a sign-up code. The parent finishes the lessons on a phone and receives a certificate with a number that can be checked.

WHAT WE ASK OF PARTNERS

- Tell us what is missing for your families and what listing a class would require.
- Keep a few referral cards where families can see them, if it fits your practice.
